STYLE SHEET

We prefer all submissions in electronic form (Word files attached to email, on floppy disk or cd-rom). If hard copy is sent we need two copies.

Articles are refereed and modifications may be required.

Final texts should be submitted as electronic copy. Authors should provide an abstract of maximum 200 words with their article.

Contributors are responsible for securing copyright clearance where applicable.

Illustrations may be supplied in digital form or as photographs. They should be of good quality, and clearly numbered and labelled. Black and white illustrations are preferred. We can handle half-tones, but colour illustrations are likely to be charged to the author.

New paragraphs are not indented but preceded by a blank line.

Book and journal titles appear in italics.

Quotations of up to three lines are put between single quotation marks and appear in the main body of the text (followed by an English translation where applicable). Longer quotations (and their English translations where applicable) are indented, without quotation marks, and preceded and followed by a blank line. Quotations within quotations have double quotation marks. Omissions in quotations are indicated by [...].

Quotations in Dutch should be accompanied by English translations.

Notes are entered as endnotes only.

References may be given in the form of endnotes or by means of the author-date system.

In captions, titles of paintings or other works of art appear in italics, followed (if applicable) by the date, medium and size of the work, the name and place of the museum or collection where they are held, and any other information the copyright holder may require.

Manuscripts should be in good English. Please note that the journal does not have the resources to engage in extensive copy-editing of submissions by non-native speakers of English.

For all other matters please contact the editors at the Department of Dutch, University College London, Gower Street, London WC1E 6BT.
